Color of the Year

Paris – The color experts of the Pantone Color Institute announced ultraviolet as the color of the year 2018. In the opinion of the judging panel, the purple color expresses individuality, originality and visionary thinking like no other color. When used for interior decoration, ultraviolet makes a clear statement – of tradition and elegance or even of surprising boldness.

The fact that the color scheme of rooms and items of furniture has an impact on a person's mood has repeatedly been scientifically proven. Yet, by all means the impact can differ from person to person. "We accommodate this individuality by offering our range in more than 50 colors," explains Lijana Kocbek, who is responsible for the sale of the exclusive leather furniture of the Xtreme Collection. "If there is sufficient demand, we are able to manufacture the leather in any desired color shade, like the color of the year for example" Kocbek adds.

The leather stands out not only due to its wide range of colors, but furthermore boasts properties that make it more water and stain-resistant. As a result of this, coupled with its very good UV resistance, this furniture collection is suitable for both heavily used indoor and protected outdoor areas.

These collections were designed by renowned designer Sabina Zerezghi. They present a contemporary interpretation of classic shapes and puristic elegance.
