

URBANNATURECULTUREAMSTERDAM

WHAT'S NEW

---

Urban Nature Culture's Foodsharing collection is a series of Terra Cotta plates and bowls in different sizes, encouraging you to be creative with your table setting. Mix and match to create exciting combinations – serving a homemade meal with a diversity of side dishes, sauces and small bites. Make it part of your high-tea, serving chocolates, petit-fours and cakes, or create a little high wine with olives, crackers and a variety of nuts. Everyday moments turn into highlights, with our Foodsharing beauties – handmade in Portugal.

There's an endless variety of products you can make with the coconut – there's much more to it than its delicious, tropical taste to be enjoyed. Urban Nature Culture already created spoons, light holders and bowls from the coconut's shell – a true reflection of making the most of what nature has to offer. We can now add a stunning lamp to that – sanded and given a smooth finish by Indian craftsmen. A prime example of the circular economy we should all invest in – one with nature.

Caring and sharing, that's what a meal is about. Invite your loved ones, set the table with all your favourite things and serve your homemade dish in the hand-painted Urban Nature Culture bowl taki. Where the Hawaiian poke bowl has become famous worldwide, the Japanese have been keeping their tradition of the taki bowl – everyone taking a scoop of their own from the same bowl. Hand-painted and made in Portugal, this one-of-a-kind piece of stoneware deserves to be part of your next dinner party.

The Greek philosopher Aristotle was more than right when he said 'In all things of nature, there is something of the marvelous'. We took that wisdom and found inspiration in the Ancient Greek stoneware – its timeless design continues to stand strong in today's modern interiors. Our Minos vase, hand-made in Portugal, adds a contemporary interpretation of the ceramic past to your home.

URBANNATURECULTUREAMSTERDAM

WHAT'S NEW

---

Another unique piece with a story, traveling all the way from India. The handloom weaving cluster in jaipur, India, takes the short fiber leftover from combing wool or spinning silk – known as noil silk – and hand spins and weaves it into fabrics. That fabric, recycled silk, is used to create UNC's Follow Me Carpet. A handwoven carpet with colorful waves, looking for a new home to embrace.

Create your own little tea ceremony, with Urban Nature Culture's Vintage Japanese Mug. In Japan, 'The Way of Tea' is a cultural activity, which requires ceremonial preparation and includes a presentation of matcha, powdered green tea. While a chakai is a simple tea ceremony for friends, involving a light meal, a chaji is a formal gathering that can last up to four hours! It's all up to you which one you're choosing to have – but one thing's for sure...our Vintage Japanese Mug, available in a selection of colors, loves to be part of your tea ritual.