A giant adventurer's tunic.

A flamenco dancer.

A young lady jumping rope.

A bird flying over a scorched earth.

An ingenue waiting in front of a fence.

A dancer in a tutu, resting.

The leaves rustling with the wind.

Everything is movement, everything is object, everything is unique, poetic and raw.

For over twenty years, Thierry Laudren has been exploring the frontiers between the object and the sculpture. Twice a year, the artist creates and realizes a collection of art pieces for the Maison&Objet exhibition. The sculptures (form a set imagined for a defined space) are created together for a defined space. They become a global art work, which then disperse in French, English, American, Chinese and even Indian interiors.
