Leader of the Pack

The only company with the patent that counts

Los Angeles, CA: A British icon since 1834, WOLF continues to command attention in the luxury leather-goods market, designing the world's most exquisite watch winders, watch boxes, and jewelry cases. Still family led, WOLF maintains their quality craftsmanship year after year, distinguishing themselves from others, with their superior, patented technology.

WOLF not only understands the importance of keeping timepieces wound accurately, and effectively, they, and only they, have the technology to support it.

WOLF is the only company worldwide, that holds the patent, #7,575,367, that is used on each, and every one of their watch winders. This patent includes their invented algorithms, and technology as to how the turns are counted.

What does this mean? No matter how heavy, or light a watch, the quartz eye that counts the rotations, will not let the winder stop, or stall, until it has completed its TPD.

Please be advised, WOLF has not licensed this technology to anyone. There are imitators that claim they can produce similar results but merely use time within a rotation cycle. WOLF however, in business now for over 180 years, knows that relying on time, is simply never enough.

Watch Winders retail up to $25,999

Today, WOLF, in its 184th year, remains as the luxury solution for safekeeping and maintaining life's most precious goods. From watch winders, watch storage solutions, jewelry cases and travel accessories, this family led company continues to pride itself on its unique technology, and hand made products that separate them from the rest of the industry. With world headquarters in Los Angeles, WOLF has become the only watch winder and jewelry box company to consistently innovate and re-invent.
