Heart Shaped Cone Chair by Verner Panton

In contrast to many midcentury designs that keep their cool, Verner Panton's Pop Art-inspired chair offers a playfully passionate silhouette. His 1959 rendition of a traditional wingback chair is a prime example of his efforts "...to encourage people to use their fantasy imagination and make their surroundings more exciting." The enveloping sweep of the upholstered back and seat tapers down to a base of strong but slender stainless steel. With its vibrant red upholstery, the chair makes an eye-catching addition to any living room, bedroom, or library.
