Winter dream

The raven, as a master, is walking around, perched on a tree
The snake, agile, is hiding in the coppice,
The both of them gazed upon lovingly by the Ingenue
Who admires her three sculpture stands
So as to encounter hat, ballet skirt and ruff
And put on her soft tunic,
Objects of her night dreams,
Before languishing the coming winter.

With his collection Winter dream created for the Maison&Objet show of september 2019, the artist Thierry Laudren explores the frontiers between object and sculpture, as he's been doing for over 20 years. Black and white dominate, contrasted by touches of red and blue. Everything is movement, everything is object, everything is poetic and elegant.

The sculptures form a set imagined for a defined space. They become a global artwork which are then dispersed in French, English, American, Chinese or Indian interiors.
