1930 Constantin Samard inherits his passion for leather from a family in which three generations dedicated themselves to saddlery and horse equipment.

1987 Stephan Arnal, the grandson of Constantin Samard, takes over the family business with passion and creativity.

Today, RECIFE accompanies modern men and women on the move. Designed in Paris with a unique French touch and elegance, our collections express joy of life, innovation, creativity and traditional craftsmanship.

A joyful piece of Paris
for the flamboyant traveler since 1930

THE BELT

From a simple accessory to the last realm of clothing to be conquered, the belt is for RECIFE the new creative Eldorado.

RECIFE reinvents the belt and makes it emerge as the new platform to express design and personality in a wardrobe that is already overexploited in terms of style.

More than an accessory, the belt becomes a wardrobe essential.

TALENTS

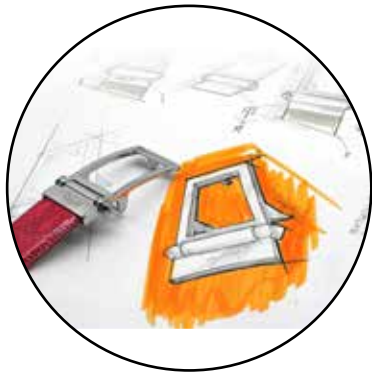

The creative department with its unique «French touch» consists of designers coming from different horizons. They have brought their various talents together to create The Belt.

Each RECIFE belt has a heart. Focusing on uncompromised quality, our craftsmen work only with the very best materials, each belt being made one at a time.

Each RECIFE belt leaving our workshop is unique, there is no mass production. The same highly skilled craftsman is in charge of his products from the beginning until it is ready for delivery.

PRODUCTION PROCESS

1. Design

2. Leather selection

3. Leather processing

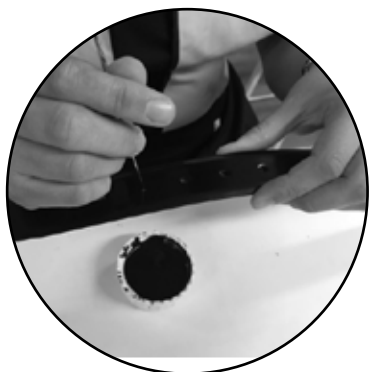

4. Cutting

5. Assembling

6. Sewing

7. Painting

8. Polishing and buffing

9. Final product

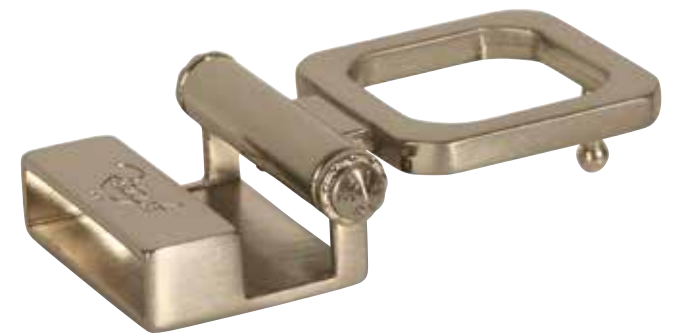

The production process to make our belts is lengthy and divided into four sub-processes: research and design, preparatory stages, assembling and finishing. Further sub-processes may be added into the sequence. The list of operations that our leathers undergo vary with the type of leather.
