Outdoor Passion

Feelgood Designs has expanded and enlarged its outdoor range over the years, creating a completely separate, highly distinctive collection for patio, lawn or veranda. The brand meets the key criteria for outdoor furniture: functionality, quality and durability.

For summer 2020, Feelgood Designs unveils a new colour. Wheat is a brighter, more natural wicker hue for the new Kakī collection and two of the brand's iconic models: the basket chair and the C603.

For added comfort and softness, Sunbrella® outdoor fabric cushions are available in a wide range of contemporary colours.

Lineage of success

Influenced by its Australian origins, Feelgood Designs has always inclined towards a pure style that looks just as good outdoors as it does in the home. A natural choice for the founders, who opt for al fresco living and dining whenever possible.

To ensure a long life whatever the weather, rattan makes way for a highly resistant synthetic fibre with an identical look and feel to its natural twin. Material quality and technical mastery ensure maximum comfort and relaxation; the light, transparent lines are pleasing on the eye, too. The only discernible difference is the variation in the tints.

For its teak furniture, Feelgood Designs opts for simple finishes and lines that work both indoors and out.

Kakī crazy

The Kakī rattan chair collection, designed by Jamie McLellan* and first released in January 2019, now includes similarly distinctive outdoor versions: porte-à-faux legs add an original touch to the synthetic fibre shell. Traditional and modern at the same time, Kakī ticks all the boxes for millennials who are hooked on vintage furniture and love living their lives in the open air.

Comprising a chair with and without armrests and a low lounge, the Kakī collection is ideal for lunchtimes or lazy afternoons in the sun.

 With a nod to New Zealand's famous black stilt (Kakī in the Maori language), which has long, fine legs.*

An ambiance to suit everyone

Kakī comes in two light-friendly tints that bring the best out of the base material: Wheat, a very natural new hue, and chic, low-key graphite. Add a personal touch with cushions in Sunbrella® outdoor fabric, available in various colours.
