Jean-Louis Deniot

Featured on several interior design publications, such as Elle Decor and even AD 100 lists of the world's preeminent talents in architecture and interior design, Jean-Louis Deniot (<http://www.deniot.com/>) never ceases to surprise us. His timeless designs with a touch of boldness and casualty are the reason why he is recognized all over the world in this field. From designing out-of-this-world residential properties in London and India to restoring the Château Latour winery for French businessman and husband of Salma Hayek, François Pinault, Deniot has done it all.

Christian Liaigre

The epitome of refined modernism, Christian Liaigre needs no introduction. This french interior designer balances calm color palettes relatively unadorned furniture harmoniously to create a serene atmosphere. The interior and furniture designer achieves minimalist French elegance with the use of sumptuous silk, linen, leather and wood. With names such as Calvin Klein, Ralph Lauren and Marc Jacobs also charting his client list, he's undoubtedly one of the greats.

Chahan Minassian

Chahan Minassian is an interior designer, gallery director and a source of design inspiration for many. After studying interior design in Paris, he joined the prestigious firm of Ralph Lauren where, for seven years, he was the creative director for Europe. In 1993, he created his own agency, Chahan Interior Design, rapidly attracting commissions from all over the world.. His style is a subtle, enigmatic sophistication, drawing on luxurious materials such as lacquer, bronze, eel skin, and tortoiseshell. His designs reflect a passion for exotic ambiance and space, beautiful modern interior design.

Gilles & Boissier

Partners in both work and life Patrick Gilles and Dorothee Boissier were destined to work together. Their united creative minds are a force to be reckoned with and blending classic and contemporary styles with neutral color palettes is their forte. When designers are working their magic on the illustrious Four Seasons hotels you know they're capable of something really special.

10 Rue Portalis, 75008 Paris, France. Telephone: +33 1 45 41 74 96.

Joseph Dirand

Since Joseph Dirand moved his agency to the top floor of a building, near the Place Saint-Georges, he hovers. Is it because it dominates the roofs of Paris or because it no longer touches land because of its shipyards in chaos? In any case, the interior designer has taken the height. And importance. With his beard and his look of bobo, Joseph embodies this new generation of decorators, both cool and intelligent, as much fond of contemporary art as fashion. His radical writing, with its unmistakably black and white graphics, seduced Paris as much as New York, London or Tel Aviv.

51 Rue Saint-Georges, 75009 Paris, France. Telephone: +33 1 44 69 04 80.
