

BRASS:

The Elected Metalwork and Its Benefits For Bathroom Designs

In 2021, brass reappeared in luxurious interior designs showing how to make a design shine through its material. Brass is known as an alloy of copper and zinc, but its hardness and workability are what turns it into such desirable metalwork for elegant interior designs. Maison Valentina recognized its tremendous value as well as its ecological side since brass is fully recyclable without losing performance quality. The classy and malleable properties of this material are enhanced by the brand that creates unique design solutions through handcrafted techniques that glow up any room.

In the beginning, during the Roman empire, brass was used in pipelines, warlike instruments, adornments, and statues but gained popularity as a home decorative showpiece for the bourgeoisie in the 16th century. Nowadays, this material has several purposes from household items to big surfaces, and regarding interior design, the advantages are remarkable.

While Koi Collection brings a nature hint mixed with an eclectic and noble touch of brass, the Symphony Family represents a mid-century charm for high-end interiors. In this collection, brass takes over all the furniture and accessories, assuming the position of the lead actor. Maison Valentina highlights the versatility of the powerful material molding it into washbasins, freestanding, bathtubs, and lighting so it gets easy to make any room shine with the dazzling expression of brass.

Considering the aesthetic property this metal, it can lift entire rooms once brings strength to decors. Knowing that brass is set to withstand the normal wear and tear better than other materials, as it resists corrosion, is the most wanted in interior design. Other than that, it is easy to maintain the shine of this metal daily, making it glow every time.
