A wound that has healed is beautiful in its own way, not least for the underlying message it conveys. scars and imperfections are part of our history and have made us who we are today: they should not be hidden but displayed with pride... the same is true of objects.

KINTSUGI OR THE ART OF SUBLIMATING THE SCARS OF LIFE

all women are unique, just like our golden scar collection. damaged porcelain objects are repaired using the ancient japanese technique of kintsugi: gold joints are used to put broken pieces back together just as modern treatments enable those with breast cancer to be made whole again.
