DELMOR beach towel

What Kind of Material is the Delmor Beach Towel Made of?

Delmor beach towel is made of 100% recycled materials, guaranteeing environmentally sustainable manufacture by using 70% of recycled cotton that is taken from the leftover material of five t-shirts. Colors evolved gradually from the leftover fabrics.

The remaining 30% of the recycled Delmor beach towel is made from collected plastic bottles that are transformed into polyester yarn.

The entire process of using recycled materials saves around 5000 liter of freshwater, helping to create a more sustainable and environmentally friendly future.

WE PRODUCE

BY 100% RECYCLING

%100 Recycling is the basis of our production process. Our story revolves around it. Collected plastic bottles and leftover fabrics turn into fibers. The fibers process into yarn, and yarn turns into towels.

WITH ZERO WASTE

To minimize carbon emissions, we do everything possible. We don't consume clean water for production, nor do we waste anything. None. Zero. Instead, we use what is considered waste as an ingredient of our product. We are committed to the zero-waste philosophy and following our footprints with a great care.

UNDYED WITHOUT CHEMICALS

Our beach towels and peshtemals are undyed and chemical-free, since we utilize the color of leftover materials in the manufacturing process.
