MOTARASU wins Best Furniture with the JUNDO daybed

For the first time a Scandinavian Design Award sees the light of day. Created by the long time dedicated Scandi lover, Stefan Peters who runs the blog NordicWannabe

Scandinavian Design Award by NordicWannabe

The idea of the award is to bring together the community of passionate design lovers and connect them with individuals. Design awards are usually awarded according to what the panel of judges decides. At the Scandinavian Design Award the rules are different. Here it is the public who votes on their favorite design.

The reason why JUNDO won the Design Award

The JUNDO daybed designed by Mads Emil Garde for MOTARASU combines Scandinavian and Japanese design at its best. Despite its length of almost two meters, the beech lounger appears very light and stable thanks to its construction of 16 elements.

Designed by Mads Emil Garde

Jundo is Japanese for purity, which is what the designer, Mads Emil Garde sought for with this poetic design. It is the examination of what you can create with one simple shape.

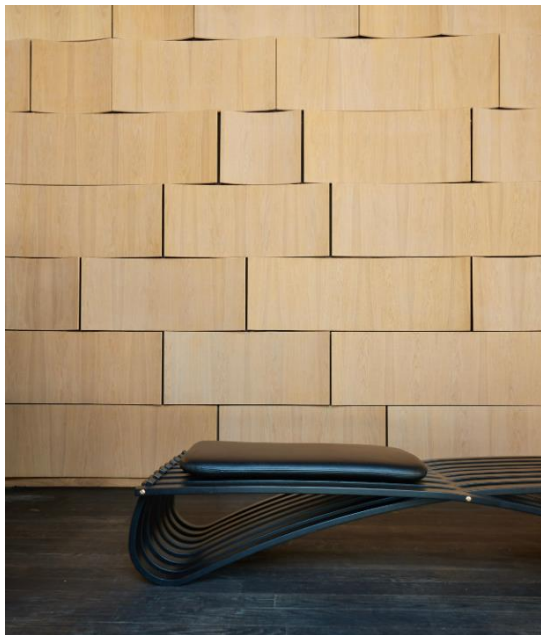

You can personalize the JUNDO daybed depending on the type of use with how many cushions you place and how you place them – across the ribs, along the ribs or you can use the cushions up against a wall. Manufactured in Denmark with upholstery from Kvadrat textile or Sorensen Leather

"By compressing the use of several components, the traditional bed-rib is shaped to serve as both bed-base and legs. The multiplied bed-rib is assembled to a bed with a sculptural yet functional form." – Mads Emil Garde

At MOTARASU we seek designs that calls for "being present in the now". With the design heritage of Denmark and Japan our aim is to bring on the philosophy of surrounding yourselves with few but beautiful and qualitative designs that moves you and brings joy.
