Owl, deer and bear cub - Klatt Objects' animal collection welcomes new additions

Three out of five new collectables: ram, owl and bear cub © Klatt Objects

Sometimes familiar, sometimes exotic, sometimes cheerful, sometimes shy – but always meticulously detailed and lovingly handcrafted from high-quality bone china: the Klatt Objects animals have become highly sought-after collectables. Now the brand's growing global fanbase can look forward to some new additions, as this autumn the brand's founder, Detlef Klatt, is expanding the collection with no fewer than five heart-warming figures. The new arrivals include a bear cub and a proud stag, as well as an owl, a penguin and a swan.

New forest and farm animals

Whether cows, sheep, boars or piglets – farm animals play a special role for the brand's founder, Detlef Klatt, who has moved into his parents' farm with Klatt Objects and is carrying on the business in a creative way. So the existing farm community is now joined by the ram, who, with his large horns, complements the flock of sheep in a protective – and perhaps slightly aggressive – manner.

At the same time, the range of woodland and meadow animals is also expanding rapidly. New to the range is the proud red deer, which was named 'Animal of the Year' in Germany in 2026 and is depicted by Klatt Objects in an elegant, classic pose. Alongside it, a brown bear cub pads through the undergrowth – a cheeky and curious baby animal that is taking hearts by storm.

New in plumage

Also from this fall, the owl joins the already extensive collection of native birds, ranging from blackbirds to wrens. With its calm, intelligent gaze, it harmoniously complements any winter decoration. The new swan adds a touch of particular elegance and is enjoying a remarkable revival, not just in Christmas decorations. The little penguin also has the potential to become a true collector's item. Instead of black and white, this Antarctic swimming champion is presented by Klatt Objects in a pure white tailcoat – self-assured and composed.

With its figurative animal series, the boutique brand Klatt Objects deliberately focuses on the emotional aspect of interior design. The artisanal craftsmanship and the high-quality, traditionally produced bone china ensure that these soul-soothing pieces harmonise perfectly even in minimalist, contemporary settings, whilst adding a highly personal touch. The Klatt Objects animals measure on average between five and seven centimetres and, depending on the model, can be hung, laid flat or stood up.
